Alicia K. Storm

TOPIC
Court-Appointed Advocate
Delinquency, Neglect and Abuse

Alicia K. Storm began her legal career by attending the Western Michigan University Thomas M. Cooley Law School in Grand Rapids, Michigan, where she distinguished herself from her peers as an articulate litigator and skilled mediator.

After law school, she worked with three former-U.S. Attorneys in Grand Rapids, Michigan on matters which ranged from contract formation and trademark application to grand jury investigation and defense of an individual on a cold-case murder trial. It was there that she gained knowledge and understanding of how to effectively manage a case start to finish, as well as work on high-profile and high-stress cases.

Following that, Alicia joined a firm for several years which specialized in family law, insurance claims, and real estate transactions. Family law quickly became the focus of Alicia's legal practice. Then, in 2016, she made the move south to join another attorney in Kalamazoo at her family law practice specializing in custody disputes, divorce, and adoptions. At that time, Alicia also began working as a court-appointed advocate on juvenile cases involving delinquency and neglect and abuse. She now works at Markou Law and has been there for three years focusing on Family Law and Juvenile work.

Additionally, Alicia is passionate about pro bono volunteering. Currently she volunteers with the Kalamazoo County Family Law Clinic and volunteers yearly for the Michigan High School Mock Trial hosted by the Michigan Center for Civic Education.

Alicia Storm has built her experience and sharpened her skills at each stage of her legal career. She is respected by her colleagues and was recently elected by them to be Vice-Chairperson of the Kalamazoo Family Law Bar Association, along with being a council member for the State Bar of Michigan Family Law Section. She is recognized not only as a candid and passionate advocate for her clients, but also as a compassionate and prudent counselor of the law. She is fully equipped to handle the complex issues of custody, parenting time, child support, divorce, and paternity, regardless of how contentious the matter may be.
